Recent perspectives in neuropsychological and behavioral evaluation of the Attention Deficit with/without Hyperactivity Disorder

Vicente Félix Mateo

Spain

psicofelix@hotmail.com
Abstract

This paper shows new tendencies in the evaluation of the attention deficit with hyperactivity disorder (ADHD). Beginning with the more traditional assessment based on behavioral estimations performed in natural contexts by parents and teachers, to neuropsychological evaluation of executive functions, to considering the challenges of functional Magnetic Resonancy (fMR).

Key words: ADHD evaluation, executive functions, neuropsychological evaluation, fMR.